Both acts of vaudeville at the Pavilion are exceptionally good. LaVell's dogs are unusually well trained. At no time during the act are the dogs spoken to by their master. They go through their routine of tricks seemingly of their own free will, and each one seems to know just when its turn to work comes, as trick after trick is done without a word being spoken. Everything goes like clockwork. The diving dog climbs a ladder that reaches way up into the peak of the building and from this point dives into a net. The boxing dogs cause a lot of laughter and the entire act is highly pleasing. John Dooley, the comedian, has a brand new line of jokes and parodies and delivers them in a manner that is very pleasing. His burlesque imitation of Harry Lauder is very funny and gets him a lot of hearty laughs. Both acts close their engagement to-night. An all-new program of pictures comes to-day.

RAILROAD FROM RUTLAND TO NEWPORT VIA BARRE

Connecting D. & H. With C. P. R.

Bringing this proposition before the public only strengthens the evidence that the promoters are acting in good faith, while little information is given to the public through the press. We already know that the real survey has been made and the actual estimates of cost of construction have been submitted by engineers of known ability, which fact proves beyond a question that our anticipations will be blessed with the realization. This procedure, although we admit long developing, yet is far from lifeless. It takes time to bring about changes of this size and character, and the promoters should receive the hearty cooperation from everybody in the district where this survey has been made. It is with this as with the Depot Square Drug store; at first it looked as though it would be of little use, but the older it grows and the longer it runs, the more people realize its usefulness and the increased patronage is appreciated. The fact alone that the business has taken the start it has proves that this city needs this store, and we assure the patronage we need their support to give the goods and service that they require.
